

Your Turn

Now it is your turn to use some original Census material from 1891 to do a real investigation of an area. The area is Chelsea in London which is mostly very wealthy, a terraced house now costs on average £748,594* compared to the national average of £82,016*. Has Chelsea always been like this? What sort of people used to live there? Using the Census we can travel back to 1891 to see what Chelsea was like over 100 years ago.

Remember that this will also show you how it can be done so you can try your own area.

Final Statement/Conclusion.

Hopefully you have investigated all the houses and can now provide a statement about Chelsea in 1891.

Choose the sentences that best describe Chelsea and when you have finished press print to keep your answer.

The people that lived in Chelsea in 1891 were all quite similar or
The people that lived in Chelsea in 1891 had very different lives

The housing that these people lived in would have been generally the same
or
The housing that these people lived in was totally different

The houses were mostly split up into smaller units for the families to live in
or
Some of the houses for the poorer people were shared by more than one family

Most families could afford to have a few servants
or
Only the richer families could afford to have lots of servants

The people did similar sorts of jobs
Or
The people did not all do the same sorts of jobs

They would have been paid similar amounts
or
They would have been paid very different amounts

Most poor people living in Chelsea had been born locally
or
The rich people in Chelsea had mostly been born locally

I think the houses that remain today would mainly have the same sorts of people living in them as in 1891
or
I think the houses that remain today would have different sorts of people living in them from 1891
